HAYDEN BROS. Great Moving Sale

Was ever sale so popular? Its magnitude, importance and success will be a mile stone, if not an epoch, in the dry goods trade of Omaha. It was said to be impossible to close out our present stock before moving time, but the prices, the quality and the variety of goods, have done wonders in making the a signal success. The sale is absolute, no matter how great the sacrifice, many lines will be closed out entirely. will positively begin in the new store Oct. 15 with an entirely new stock of dry goods. To accomplish this we are continually letting down the prices. The ribbon stock is still complete in widths, shades and fancy designs. It is difficult to quote prices, they are so very low. ANDREWS' ASSIGNMENT. As a Last Resort it is Made to the Sheriff. Messrs, S. L. Andrews & Co., retail clothiers, have made an assignment for the benefit of their unsecured creditors. When Mr. Andrews found that he would be unable to meet his payments and could secure no further extension from his chief creditors, Henry W. King & Co., of Chicago, he secured King & Co. by chattel mortgages or his stock and fixtures and, in addition, by mortgages on his realty. This proceeding was severely commented upon by the belated creditors, but as they had many of them held a winning hand in similar games, they consoled themselves with the reflection that "we cannot always be lucky," and awaited results. It would seem now that Andrews himself has all along stood where McCarty did, and that instead of being is with King & Co. to receive his divvy at the final settlement he will get nothing, though McCarty did get something if the story about him is correct. Andrews claims that he has been frozen out entirely and will have no surplus what ever to continue business with, and as the stock of merchandise has been sold and has not cleared enough to meet King & Co.'s claim, the real estate will have to be sold to pay the balance, and as it is pretty weil mortgaged the chances are that the results awaited for by the belated ones will not

STREET SWEEPING. Contractors Must Do Good Work or Get No Pay.

When the August bill of Charles E. Fanning & Co. for sweeping the streets came up before the board of public works vesterday. Mr. Hammond objected to its allowance unti the account had been made up and certified to by the city engineer, as was contemplated by the contract. The bill was turned over to that officer, and the chairman notified Mr. Siavm, one of the sweeping firm, that he must hereafter notify the city engineer each morning of the streets swept during the pre ceeding night. The engineer or his assistants will inspect the work, and if not satisfactor ily it will have to be gone over again or no allowance will be made for it. The August bill was $1.644.70, and the board think it should be reduced to about $1,300.

Mile. Rhea's Coming Engagement at Boyd's.

It is with a great deal of pleasure that the management of Boyd's opera house announce the return of that most popular actress and general favorite, Mile Rhea. During her three previous engagements at Boyd's opera house Mile. Rhea won her audience completely by the brilliancy of her acting, her magnificent presence, the exquisite taste in the display of her tollette, and lastly by her amiableness and social qualities. There is no greater favorite upon the American stage to-day than Mile. Rhea with social people, and her audiences are, almost without exception, composed of the best people, wherever she apppears. Mile Rhea has just she apppears. Mile Rhea has just returned from Europe where she enjoyed a much needed vacation, and now she comes to us refreshed and invigorated, and in the full zenith of her fame. While in Paris Mile. Rhea purchased a very elaborate wardrobe, a portion of which will be displayed for the first time during the Omaha engagement. Mile. Rhea will be supported by an excellent company, the principal being Mr. William Harris, one of the most popular leading men in America. Three performances will be given in Omaha. On performances will be given in Omaha. On Friday night, September 21, "Adrienne Le-couvrier;" Saturday afternoon matinee, "An Unequal Match;" Saturday night, "Much

"Arabian Nights" at the Grand. Extra preparations are being made at the Grand opera house for the engagement of the "Arabian Nights," which will open Monday evening. New traps are being put in the stage especially for this great spectacular play, and steam pipes are being put in in order to snow the steam curtain, which is a feature of this entertainment, to the best possible advantage. The company played a very successful engagement in Kanras City week against the competition of Booth-Bar-rett, Barnum, Gus Williams and the expesition opening. The fact that each night their houses increased in numbers shows how ex-cellent was the impression they made. The company is very large, strong in specia stars, and with a ballet and chorns of fasci-nating girls. Mr. James R. Adams, the advance stage manager, has been in the city for two days past, making the preliminary arrangements. The company will arrive here from Kansas City this evening. The "Arabian Nights" met with much favor here one year ago, and they will be warmly wel-comed at the new Grand next week. The sale of reserved seats will open at the box office Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

THE FINAL SCENE. eridan Gives His Reminiscences Lee's Surrender.

North American for September: In the meantime, General Lee came over to McLean's house in the village of Appomattox Court House. I am not certain whether General Babcock, of General Grant's staff, who had arrived in advance of the general, had gone over to see him or not. We had waited some hours, and, I think, about 12 or 1 o'clock General Grant arrived. General Ord. myself, and many officers were in the main road leading through the town, at a point where Lee's army was visible. General Grant rode up and greeted me with, "Sheridan, how are you?" I re plied, "I am very well, thank you." He then said: "Where is Lee?" I replied: There is his army down in that valley: he is over in that heuse (pointing to Mc Lean's), waiting to surrender to you. General Grant, still without dismount ing, said: "Come, let us go over." then made the same request of General Ord, and we all went to McLean's house. Those who entered with General Grant were, as nearly as I can recollect, Ord, Rawlins, Seth Williams, Ingalls, Babcock, Parker and myself; the staff officers, or those who accompanied, remain ing outside on the porch steps and in the yard. On entering the parlor we found General Lee standing in company with Colonel Marshal, his aide-decamp. The first greeting was to Gen-eral Seth Williams, who had been Lee's adjutant when he was superintendent of the military academy. General Lee was then presented to General Grantand all present were introduced. General Lee was dressed in a new gray uniform, evidently put on for the occas. ion, and wore a handsome sword. had on his face the expression of relief from a heavy burden. General Grant's uniform was soiled with mud and vice, and he wore no sword. After a few words had been spoken by those who knew General Lee, all the officers retired, except, perhaps one staff officer of General Grant and the one who was with General Lee. We had not been absent from the room longer than about five minutes when General Babcock came to the door and said: render has taken place you can come in again." When we re-entered, General Grant was writing on a little wooden ellip-tical-shaped table (purchased by me from Mr. McLean and presented to Mrs. G. A. Custer) the conditions of the surrender. General Lee was sitting, his hands resting on the hilt of his sword, to the left of General Grant, with his back to a small marble-topped table, on which many books were piled. While General Grant was writing, friendly conversation was engaged in by Genera Lee and his aid with the officers present, and he took from his breast pocket two dispatches, which had been sent to him by me during the forencon, notify-ing him that some of his cavalry in front of Crook were violating the agreement entered into by withdrawing. I had not had time to make copies when they were sent, and had made a request to have them returned. He handed them to me with the remark: "I am sorry. It is possible my cavalry at that of the line did not fully understand the agreement." About one hour was occupied in drawing up and signing the terms, when General Lee retired from the house with a cordial shake of the hand with

gray horse, and, lifting his hat, passed through the gate and rode over the crest of the hill to his army. On his arrival there we heard wild cheering, which seemed to be taken up pro-

1st premium to Union sewing machine It Was all the Money They Had. An old man and a little girl walked into a down-town saloon about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, says the Chicago Tribune: It was not their first visit. The white-aproned bartender regarded them curiously. The half a dozen loungers lowered their voices in respect to the little tot of femininity. Nervously fumbling in his pockets the aged toper called for a drink. The little girl left his side and with a furtive glance at the bartender stole over to the lunch-table. From noon until 2 o'clock a generous and tempting array of viands is gener-ally provided in this particular resort. It had been removed a few minutes before the old man and his little companion arrived. Raising on tip-toe the little girl looked over a clear expanse of snow-white tablecloth. A pitiful expression of disappointment passed over tions. The old man was just raising a glass of whisky to his lips when the little girl rushed across the room and clutched him by the arm: "Grandpa! grandpa!" she exclaimed in shrill childish treble, "don't drink a face pinched with hunger and priva-

the lunch is all gone." The trembling hand withdrew the glass that had almost touched his lips. A look at the table vertified the child's statement. He had already paid for the drink. Motioning the bartender to the end of the long polished bar, the old man said: "Please give me back the money must go without the drink if I die for it.

It's all we have in the world and the little girl has not had anything to eat since morning. Please give me back the money. "Here's a quarter; don't come in here again," replied the bartender. Hand in hand they went out, he with his head down and she with a glad look in her eyes. He started to go into another saloon, but she held him back. They walked half a block and entered a cheap restaurant. Do not fail to get my way down prices on watches, jewelry and watch repairing. H. F. Bundy, 1613 Farnam St.
